*NKESC staff should complete appropriate paperwork on the Time Machine prior to activity.

*College credit will be available through Friends University. Since this is a 3 day workshop, 3 credit hours are offered.

You must come to the first class to receive all credit hours. If you have questions, please contact Cindy Schroeder at cschroeder@nkesc.org.

This is a three day workshop. Teachers may enroll in one, two, or three hours of college credit.

DAY ONE will consist of an overview of instructional strategies that research has found to be proven effective throughout the curriculum and across all grade levels. Each strategy will be explored in depth and will include video examples of classroom implementation. At the end of day one attendees will have been provided with the knowledge and resources necessary to begin utilizing these strategies in their classrooms.

DAY TWO of the workshop will focus on "The Daily Grind" as it is heavily focused on the day-to-day tasks and activities involved in being a teacher and working with students. Attendees will be provided comprehensive details for instructional planning in the context of both academic and social behavior. Additionally, we will discuss effective content instruction and the interaction between teacher and student to facilitate success. Clear detail and examples for implementation will be provided.

DAY THREE of the workshop will begin with a review of the process with participants. Implementation successes and failures will be discussed with suggestions for tweaking the process for success. The importance of data will be discussed and data collection techniques will be developed.
